The anticipated start date is July 2023 or as mutually agreed on with the preferred candidate.

UBC Botanical Garden is Canada's oldest university botanic garden, established in 1916 and contains over 5400 different kinds of plants in its living collections. 39% of its collections are of wild origin and in addition to attracting garden enthusiasts, the Garden provides plants and plant materials for academic study and research. The Garden includes the renowned Japanese Nitobe Memorial Garden and an extensive Nursery site, all of which is situated on the University of British Columbia's Point Grey campus, approximately 13 kilometers from downtown Vancouver. It has an annual operating budget of $3M, a total annual attendance of 100,000 and up to 52 full- and part-time staff members. It is a popular and busy public venue for events and education.

Reporting to the Dean of Science, the Director provides leadership and vision in the Garden, maximizing engagement through collaborative research, public programming, and community participation. A strong leader, the Director is responsible for overseeing and directing the Garden, including the activities of strategic development, oversight of the living collections, financial performance, project development and implementation, promotion and coordination of research, educational programming, membership development, marketing and public relations, fundraising, and ongoing governance of this complex unit within the Faculty of Science.

The ideal candidate will bring leadership characterized by an ability to garner broad community support, including the volunteer group Friends of the UBC Botanical Garden, to increase visibility of the organization and carry forward major projects and programs. They will also bring a passion for gardens and a creative vision for reimagining the role of botanical gardens in an environment aspiring to champion equity, decolonization, and address our global biodiversity crisis and the climate emergency.
